We seek an engaged teacher and scholar who utilizes multicultural curriculum and culturally relevant or sustaining pedagogies and is experienced in restorative practices/justice. In addition to teaching, advising, and developing a strong scholarly agenda, the successful candidate will participate in program development, review, and revision; take leadership in social justice education programming and outreach; and provide service to the school, university, and community.

Qualifications:

Required:

- Doctoral degree in multicultural/social justice education or its equivalent; exceptional ABD candidates near completion will be considered.
- Demonstrated commitment to and academic work grounded in social justice education.
- Strength using experiential pedagogies in teaching.
- Evidence of capacity to connect scholarship and practice to prepare educators from a range of settings.

Preferred:

- Teaching experience in any of the following areas: restorative justice/practices, multicultural/social justice education, leadership, educational foundations, social/emotional learning, social action theatre.
- Evidence of research/scholarly activity related to the above.
- Demonstrated excellence in working with culturally, socioeconomically, and/or linguistically diverse learners.

Application Information:

Electronic submission required; please visit <https://jobs.newpaltz.edu/> and search for faculty positions. The candidate will be required to submit a cover letter (please include a brief statement of your teaching philosophy in your cover letter), CV, and contact information for three professional references. References provided will be sent a link to upload a letter of recommendation. Individuals with disabilities who need assistance with the application process should call (845) 257-3675.
